Built to Last

How 13 years of character, leadership, and family vision led Balazs W Kardos to 6A2-7

“Despite what artificial intelligence might lead us to believe, humans are still the pinnacle of innovation. Technology would not exist without us. Neither would Enagic’s patented 8-point compensation plan. This powerful system rewards teamwork and embraces compassion, which are both hallmarks of humanity.”

Message from Mr. Ohshiro

Lucky Number 8.5: Kangen Water® Helps Me to Stay Energized and Inspired

It doesn't take much for me to think about Kangen Water® since I normally have a bottle in my hand. Wherever I go, I'm constantly reminded of Kangen Water®. Considering how large a part Enagic and Kangen Water® have played in my imagination for the past 50 years, you shouldn't be surprised that when I turned 85 years old on March 17, I naturally thought of Kangen Water®, which has a pH ranging from 8.5 to 9.5. 85? 8.5? Could the stars have now fully aligned? Maybe the universe is telling me that this is the best time yet to enjoy Kangen Water®.

Most Enagic Water machines produce five types of filtered, ionized waters. From highest pH (more alkaline) to lowest (more acidic), they're Strong Kangen Water®, Kangen Water®, Clean Water, Beauty Water, and Strong Acidic Water. These waters all have different applications, but hydrogen-rich Kangen Water® is the biggest part of my life. Our most versatile water type is great for hydration and benefits everything from food preparation to cooking, and coffee or tea brewing. Kangen Water® may even help seeds germinate or reinvigorate languishing plants.

I of course enjoy how Kangen Water® tastes. Our Kangen ionizers - Leveluk K8, Leveluk SD501DX, Leveluk SD501 Platinum, Leveluk Super501, Leveluk Jr IV, and Leveluk SD501U - ensure that our water also never has any unpleasant aftertastes or aromas.

At 85 years old, I remain full of vigor, which allows me to keep a full global event schedule while enjoying time with my family, friends and Independent Distributors. At least partly, this is due to having Kangen Water® handy, which keeps me hydrated and refreshed. I can still play a spirited round of golf or strum the sanshin, the three-stringed instrument from my home, Okinawa.

I'd also like to thank my wife Yaeko for keeping me energized and focused. Together, we'll keep changing the world (and drinking Kangen Water®).

6A2-7 Balazs W Kardos

Change Your Life Story

Reaching the 6A2-7 rank was especially meaningful for 6A2-7 Balazs W Kardos. This happened exactly 13 years after he became an Independent Distributor and as he turned 40. He celebrated with his wife, Margaret Kardos, who recently achieved an impressive 6A2-6 rank, and their two children. Balazs also has two other business IDs at 6A8-4 and 6A2-4, but for Balazs, this milestone represents more than rank progression. It reflects 13 years of personal growth, family vision, and leadership refinement.

This is Balazs's third E-Friends cover story, a testament to his continued business growth, his evolving perspective, and his steadfast leadership. "At this stage, it feels much more about family, gratitude, leadership, and helping other people build lives they are proud of," he says. "This chapter feels like a beautiful intersection of achievement, gratitude, family, and legacy."

"My leadership has evolved in a major way," Balazs says. "In the beginning, I thought leadership was mostly about energy. Showing up strong, casting vision, keeping people excited, and getting everyone moving. That definitely matters. Belief matters. Momentum matters, but over time I learned that motivation is only the spark. It is not the firewood."

Empowering people has made a major impact. "You do not build a great organization by keeping strong people small," he says. "Some leaders are meant to build with their own voice, mission, and way of serving people. When you give those leaders room to fully step into that, they lead with more conviction, build deeper trust, and create stronger communities."

Years ago, Balazs centered most of his team building around calls, events, and live presentations. Since then, he has found success by embracing more modern communication methods. “Technology has changed everything,” he says. “Now I can pour into people through podcasting, digital communities, education platforms, videos, voice notes, and systems that allow people to stay connected to the bigger vision much more consistently.”

His podcast, “The Diamond Life Mentor,” earned over 500,000 downloads in 3 years. Balazs has now evolved the podcast into the “The Global Prosperity Show.” He says, “That platform has allowed me to share perspective, principles, and leadership lessons at scale in a much deeper way than I could have years ago.”

Balazs also created the GPM Method, a daily approach to building stronger mindsets, health, discipline, and business practices. “I believe success has to be more holistic than just making money or hitting ranks,” he says. “Our leadership should be visible in the way we live, the way we think, the way we take care of our body, and the way we show up for our family.”

“Some of the best leaders are not meant to stay inside one container forever,” Balazs says. When the right people are given room to fully step into their own voice, values, and way of serving others, they build something far deeper and more real. I think that is a big part of what actually creates something built to last.”

Balazs credits 4 invaluable lessons from his downline that he’s applied to his leadership style:

1) “Not everyone grows at the same pace, and that does not mean they lack greatness. Earlier on, I probably expected people to move with the same urgency I had. I was hungry, intense, all in, and I think I projected that onto others. Over the years I’ve learned that leadership is not about forcing your rhythm onto everyone else. It is about understanding people better, recognizing what season they are in, and helping them move forward in a way that builds them instead of breaking them.”

2) “The loudest person is not always the strongest leader. Some of the best leaders I’ve seen were not the most hyped in the beginning. They were not the ones trying to dominate every room. They were steady. Coachable. Quietly committed. They kept showing up long after the excitement wore off. That taught me to respect substance more than noise.”

3) “People need belief before they can fully use strategy. A lot of people do not have a skill problem first. They have an identity problem first. They doubt themselves, hesitate, compare, overthink, and wait to feel more ready. Watching people over the years has taught me that a huge part of leadership is helping someone see in themselves what they cannot yet fully see on their own.”

4) “Sometimes the strongest thing you can do for a leader is not hold them tighter, but trust them enough to grow into their own full expression. I’ve come to believe that real longevity is built when aligned leaders have room to become more of who they really are, not less.”

Early success can dazzle observers, but is it sustainable? Balazs values staying power. “What really builds something lasting is clarity, consistency, and helping people get anchored in their own reason for building,” he says. “That has been a major shift for me. I no longer feel like I need to be the constant source of energy for everyone. My focus now is creating environments, tools, and messages that help people grow, think more clearly, and lead with more confidence in their own way.”

Balazs has had countless interactions with successful leaders, mentors, and protégés over the years and has identified some common threads. “Years ago, I was probably more impressed by speed, production, excitement, and big bursts,” he says. “Now I pay much more attention to the kind of person someone is becoming while they build. The leaders who stand out to me today are the ones who have real substance. They follow through. They keep their word. They stay coachable even when they start winning. They do not become entitled. They do not need constant praise or constant hand-holding. They keep growing, keep serving, and stay grounded.”

Balazs continues to find frequent inspiration from fellow distributors. “The people who really stand out now are the ones who are not trying to copy someone else’s version of leadership,” he says. “They are getting clearer in their own voice, building trust with people, and creating something that actually reflects who they are.

“I’m also deeply impressed by people who are becoming more authentic as they grow, not more performative,” Balazs says. “There is a big difference between building for approval and building from alignment.”

Taking a holistic view can often be valuable in business and throughout life. “I also respect the people who are learning how to build something meaningful without losing the parts of life that matter most,” Balazs says. “People who are becoming stronger in business while also becoming more disciplined, more present, better with their family, and more anchored in who they are. To me, that is a much more impressive kind of success than just fast results.”

“Leadership has to be earned,” he says. “What resonates with me most is when someone stops thinking like a participant and starts thinking like a builder. At this point, I am most inspired by leaders who have their own gravity — people who are not just riding momentum, but creating it.”

The main markers for success have also shifted over time. “When I first started, success meant freedom,” Balazs says. “It meant getting out of limitation. Creating income. Proving that another way of life was possible. Having more control over my time. Building something meaningful for myself and for my future family one day. Today, success feels a lot deeper.”

“Success now is not just about what I can build personally,” Balazs says. “It is about how many strong leaders can rise, stand in full alignment, and go build something meaningful that reflects their own calling. It is about helping people become powerful enough to create their own communities, culture, and impact while still contributing to something greater than themselves.”

Balazs now views success through a wider lens. “Success means building something that is bigger than one person, one brand, or one platform,” he says. “It means helping create a movement of aligned leaders who are equipped to transform lives and leave a lasting mark. What you build in people will always outlast what you build through people.”

His family with Margaret is another big part of Balazs’ story. He says, “We are home full time with our kids, Valentina and Atlas, and that part means more to me than I could have fully understood when I first began.”

“Success to me now is being fully present with my wife and children while still building globally,” Balazs says. “It is watching other leaders rise into their own strength. It is seeing aligned, authentic leaders break free from dependence, step fully into their own calling, and build communities and platforms that are real expressions of who they are. I believe that is one of the clearest signs that something is truly built to last.”

“My family and I are deeply grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Ohshiro,” he says. “The life we get to live because of this company is something we never take lightly. At this stage, success is not just about what I’ve built. It is about what has been built in me, what has become possible for my family, and what kind of legacy it creates for the people I love and the people I lead.”

“Of course I’m grateful for the rank, the growth, and everything Enagic has made possible,” Balazs says. “But what means the most to me now is who I had to become to carry this level. Discipline. Resilience. Patience. Perspective. The ability to build something meaningful without losing sight of what matters most.”

Mr. and Mrs. Ohshiro congratulate new 6A2-7 Balazs Kardos.

United States Distributor Profile

Ashley Krooks

6A2-4

6A2-4 Ashley Krooks goes the extra mile as an Independent Distributor. In the past seven years, she's traveled to over 70 countries while building her business, and she's just getting started.

Online ads have played major roles in her Enagic journey. She initially discovered Enagic and Kangen Water® through an online ad about a “freedom lifestyle.” That led to a live webinar. “I’ll never forget telling my husband we should go watch it,” Ashley says. “The rest is history.”

Ashley also made her first sale through an ad she placed online. “It was one of the coolest things I had experienced,” she says. “It really showed me what was possible. This person purchased a “trifecta,” the Kangen Water® ionizer, Anespa home spa system, and Ukon subscription combo. “I’ll never forget the first dollar that I made through this business,” Ashley says. “I took a picture with the check and still have it to this day.”

The New York native currently lives in Boulder, Colorado. Ashley previously worked corporate jobs, but never found the right fit. “Despite being an amazing student - going to an Ivy League university and graduating with above a 4.0 GPA - corporate life was not for me,” she says. “I was let go or fired from every job I had. Entrepreneurship was something I was much more aligned with - the ability to make my own schedule, dictate my income, and make an impact.”

“I was committed to finding something that was going to give me the freedom I was desiring,” Ashley says. “I wanted to travel the world and work from anywhere, be able to support my future family, make an impact, and have time, location, lifestyle and financial freedom. I got myself $50K in debt trying other opportunities before finding Enagic.” It took discovering Independent Distribution to change her trajectory while “impacting thousands and traveling the world.”

“I plan to keep pouring into my team and supporting their leadership and business growth,” she says. To maintain momentum, Ashley utilizes 4 initiatives to educate and motivate her downline:

- Zoom calls
- Facebook groups
- Facebook messenger
- Training videos

Ashley would love to reach a 6A2-5 rank (and higher). There's no reason to doubt her. Ashley has been "ALL IN" since becoming an Independent Distributor. "I burned my ships, had no plan B, and that lit a fire under me," she says. "Through countless life experiences and the way I was raised I was always a hard worker, extremely coachable, and fully committed to anything I did. I came in with a go-getter attitude, willing to do whatever it took to make it work...so I did."

Enagic Essential Workshop (EEW) in Malaysia Raises Money For Enagic Foundation

Top Malaysia leaders 6A8-6 Amos Sia, 6A5-6 Cora Loh, 6A2-5 Sia Ming Way, and 6A2-4 Simon Loh organize an Enagic Essential Workshop (EEW) every four months. This distributor-organized event series is part of Enagic® (Malaysia) Sdn Bhd's commitment to support and promote Enagic Foundation's mission while helping to raise money for their causes.

Cora is a consistent supporter and provided a Leveluk K8 Kangen Water® ionizer as a lucky draw prize at the most recent EEW. Participants purchased raffle tickets for a chance to win the machine. All proceeds passed to Enagic, which subsequently remitted money to the Enagic Foundation.

During company events, Enagic® (Malaysia) Sdn Bhd also sets up a booth to promote the Enagic Foundation's mission and encourage contributions. They collected MYR 10,477.74 ($2,660 U.S. Dollars) from both the workshop and the January 2026 company event.

It's meaningful to see the Enagic family come together with a shared purpose, supporting not only their business growth, but also giving back to the community.

Okinawa Kangen Foods presents: The World of Vegetable Ukon

Ukon: Ongoing Research and Dietary Supplementation

According to a paper published in the academic journal Food & Function, curcuminoids, the primary bioactive compounds in ukon, have been examined in scientific research for their interaction with various biological receptors involved in normal physiological processes.

Scientific studies have used laboratory methods such as molecular modeling, receptor interaction assays, and animal research models to explore how curcuminoids interact with biological systems under controlled conditions.

Another study published in the Journal of Applied Biomedicine (DOI: 10.1016/j.jab.2015.06.001) examined turmeric rhizomes in preclinical research settings to better understand their chemical interactions with biological signaling pathways.

Curcumin is a naturally occurring compound found in ukon that has been widely studied for its chemical properties and role in scientific research.

In one University of Colorado study involving healthy middle-aged and older adults, researchers examined markers related to vascular biology and oxidative processes after curcumin intake over a defined study period (12 weeks).

Ukon Factory News — Kangen Kitchen Report

Recently, Kangen Kitchen food trucks No. 1 and No. 2 went into action together at the large-scale international event held in Okinawa, the U-18 Baseball World Cup! The excitement was even greater as Okinawa Shogaku High School just claimed victory at the Summer Koshien tournament, creating an electric atmosphere throughout the venue.

On the very first day alone, the event welcomed an incredible 18,000 visitors, many of whom stopped by Kangen Kitchen. Thanks to your continued support, we feel that we are steadily becoming recognized as “the food truck specializing in ukon-based cuisine.”

Our Wagyu beef burger with special ukon buns was especially popular with international guests! Visitors from Australia, the United States, Panama, and other countries were full of praise, telling us with smiles, “Delicious!”

Word quickly spread among baseball fans as well. Many customers visited us after recommendations from friends. We were deeply grateful to see even daily regulars returning throughout the tournament.

During the event, we sold approximately 2,000 meals in total, allowing a wide range of guests to enjoy the flavors of ukon-based dishes.

Kangen Kitchen will continue to evolve, sharing with even more people the message that “Ukon is delicious—and good for your body!” Please keep an eye out for the “lucky-if-you-find-us” Kangen Kitchen in the future—we look forward to seeing you again!

Now... where should we go next, and what kind of event will it be?

Enagic China Celebrates Lunar New Year

6A4-5 Eric Wong and his Chinese team members enjoyed a vibrant Lunar New Year celebration while welcoming the Year of the Horse under the Chinese Zodiac calendar. Eric says, "I extend my warmest wishes to everyone: Happy Chinese New Year, robust health, and flourishing business!"

“We will be one of the countries with the largest market share in China globally!” Eric says, “I will do my best to achieve the best results!”
